Bob Catley, A Beautiful Night For Love

Where the last of your tears drops in the ocean
Do the dreams you conceal guide the way?
Is a past full of fear, bound by emotions?
Till a time when the sun might turn those winter skies to summer nights

How the last hundred years passed in a moment
How the sepia scenes fade to grey
Was the great lovers' dream crowned by devotion?
As they climbed on a comet's tail across the sky that never dies

For tonight is a beautiful night for love
You and i, like the stars, collide together
What a night, what a beautiful night for love
Catch the moon as it falls into your hands, like precious sand

From the rain battered hills, oh, I heard you calling
On the mist covered fields where we lay
Then at last you appeared, caught for a moment
For the light that I held for you through endless night still burns bright
