D                                  G            D
There's lilt in the song I sing there's laughter and love
         G            A                G       D
 There's tang from the sea and blue from heaven above,
   A              D       G                      D   A
Of reason there's none but why should there be but one,
    G              D                    G           A
As long as there's fire in the blood and light in the eye.

D                                 G         D
And whether the blood be highland or lowland or no.
     G         A                 G            D
And whether the skin be black or white as the snow,
    A          D         G         D           A
Of kith and of kin we're one be it right be it wrong
   G             D               G        A
as long as our voices join this chorus of song.
