Nina Storey, If I Were An Angel

Feel the pounding of my conscience.
Feel the tempest of my fear.
You take the path of least resistance.
(I) fall into another year.

You kiss the calm away completely.
While you walk the edge of fool.
But you so unravel all my senses.
And I'm trying hard to be so cool.

Because I can see that it may not work.
You may be a catch, you may be a jerk.
Because you're no hero and I'm no star,
so until we figure just who we are, who we are...

I ask if I was an angel that lit up the sky,
If I was the reason you slept through the night,
Would you promise tomorrow at the end of today?
If I was your angel,
Anyway...

Do I dare to trust my instincts?
I hear your breathing in my sigh.
But these threads I wear,
well they almost complete me.
But I could always change my mind.

Cause I figure if it don't work out,
we can laugh and claim it was all in doubt.
You were on the rocks,
I was on a curve.
It was worth a shot,
but we lost our nerve.
We lost our nerve...

I ask if I was an angel that lit up the sky,
If I was the reason you slept through the night,
Would you promise tomorrow at the end of today?
If I was your angel,

If I was your,
If I was your,
Angel
I was the reason that you,
Slept through the night,
Would you promise me tomorrow,
At the end of today,
If I was your angel
If I
Was Your

Angel (repeat chorus)
Would you promise me tomorrow
And if I was the reason
That you slept at the day

If I was your angel,
If I,
If I was your angel....
