Olivia Anna Livki, Earth moves

The moment you regain your consciousness
Comes the great empty
Your Friend speak to you, your dad speaks to you,
But they just can't reach your senses
There are sings
Every street every mile,
Standin still like wasted time
And dreams
Overseas, overseas,
So much wider than movie screens

You gotta feel the earth move
For you goodness, your strenght, your youth
Gotta feel the earth move
Believe God made a satin roof
An we're all under a roof
And we're all under roof

Facing the world's great spaces,
You decided to hide away
You learned to speak with your eyes,
Cause you don't dare with your mouth,
You're so ashamed of each word you could say

But you get keen on the beat, on the steam,
Trembling earth before the plane starts
And you get tired of the tombs, and the sighs,
And someone else's brokedown lives

You gotta feel the earth move
For you goodness, your strenght, your youth
Gotta feel the earth move
Believe God made a satin roof
An we're all under a roof
And we're all under roof

You sit the day, you hide away, whatever's coming
Sit the day you're drunk and gay, whatever,
You'll be wrong or right, wrong or right
But whatever, ever, ever, ever ever's coming
Ever, ever ever
You know you will be
Wham and bright, warm and bright

You gotta feel the earth move
For you goodness, your strenght, your youth
Gotta feel the earth move
Believe God made a satin roof
An we're all under a roof
And we're all under roof

And we're all under roof
And we're all under roof
And we're all under roof...
