Paisley Brain Cells, Doesn't Matter

I wake up in the morning and the sun is shining bright
Wondering what's become of you from morning until night
Oh now, baby what's going on
Try to tell your woman but it takes too long
To say, to say, to say
It doesn't matter anyway
As I look at my reflections through the windows of time
The good times and the bad times and the things I've left behind
All so long ago and far, far away
One thing, baby, that I'm trying to say
Today, today, today
It doesn't matter anyway
Now into forever, someplace like a dream
Trying to remember anyone or anything
If I could only find out where I've been
Maybe then there'd be no more use to pretend
To say, to say, to say
It doesn't matter anyway
