Sugarplum Fairy, Love's Turning Into Boredom

There was a song I used to sing
Every time that my heart skipped a beat
But right no that song of love seems out of reach
Seems out of key because all the notes read misery

Like Peter Pan becoming a man
Romanticizing his glory days of Neverland
But from what I what I recall
You were even more gorgeous then I thought

'Cause when the summer's turning to autumn
All of my love is turning to boredom
And when the leaves keep falling and falling
I fall as well but I rise into the blue
And fall in love with you
And fall in love with you

And now it's warm and that old song
Seems so new and so fresh so pure and beautiful
You my love you look so young and I feel strong
Wonder how could it ever go wrong?

'Cause when the summer's turning to autumn
All of my love is turning to boredom
And when the leaves keep falling and falling
I fall as well but I rise into the blue
And fall in love with you
And fall in love with you

'Cause the clouds are covering the sky
And my love is hiding in the sun

'Cause when the summer's turning to autumn
All of my love is turning to boredom
And when the leaves keep falling and falling
I turn around start running and running

Yeah, when the summer's turning to autumn
All of my love is turning to boredom
Yeah, when the summer's turning to autumn
All of my love is turning to boredom
All of my love is turning to boredom
All of my love is turning to boredom
