The Exit, Susan

She pulled her skirt back down after he was done she took a look at him she wanted to run
put a mark on her past chalk one up for brad he gave a kiss goodbye she wanted him to die

look in her eyes you can find her look in her eyes you can find her somewhere
look in her eyes you can find her
look in her eyes you can find her somewhere somewhere

the next day at school the rumors flew susan hated her name susan hated her fame and you could tell from the crowd that he felt so proud another memory for her to take home graved in stone
susan went home and cried she lost something inside

look in her eyes you can find her
look in her eyes you can find her somewhere
look in her eyes you can find her
look in her eyes you can find her somewhere
somewhere

i don't mean to kill the illusion that i have a friend named susan but i bet she has a family and a dog and a brother he's about 3 years younger sounds an awful lot like mine if i remember correctly I was 14 at the time so i think about my younger sister i sure am gunna miss her as a girl naive to this world

susan went home and cried
she lost something inside

look in her eyes you can find her
look in her eyes you can find her somewhere
look in her eyes you can find her
look in her eyes you can find her somewhere

look in her eyes you can find her
look in her eyes you can find her somewhere
look in her eyes you can find her
look in her eyes you can find her somewhere

look in her eyes you can find her
look in her eyes you can find her somewhere
look in her eyes you can find her
look in her eyes you can find her somewhere somewhere