

Across The Border, Hag Song

I traveled all directions long before your birth from the hill where the dragon sleeps to the sea of no return and I met you my child, long before your birth I am an old hag, maybe older than the earth your fathers set the dogs on us hundred years ago our knowledge was their fear. To have the balls is not all you may ask yourself what happened so many years ago we stole their children to teach them what they should know

In the name of god and a smile on their face they raped and burned my sisters, just I could escape in the shade of an old oak they couldn't see my face they couldn't see the change, they are the one to chase

From the hills of Greenland to the land of the desert sand mankind strives for power not for a better world with a raven on my shoulder and a fiddle in my hand I led their children to an unknown continent

One day they will return with me ahead with all my knowledge, my anger and my hate they will appear in your dreams, your heart and in your head you only have to wait, my child, now go to bed.
