Aesma Daeva, Tisza's Child

Daughters, sons, river deaths:
Faces pale like moons
And hands, bright stars
Fair children cradle water graves
Vast river, spirits, can you hear us pray?

Arise, hear my lullaby How I wreck my broken love Upon unlived lives Vast river, dark water I drown in lament endlessly

Spirit guide, river stag arise Eyes ablaze and hide steaming Pull treasures from turbid water

Tisza's child clothed in liquid light arise, awake, mystify How I drowning bathe in rivers That flood all hope in water Final lord, and I will fly to thee
