

Aislin, Hope Behind Cellar Doors

Take my eyes, but you cant have my heart.
I know there's a place where blind men can see.
But there's no hope to save you.
Hope can't save you, when your alone.
I've been to this place where blind men can see.
A life, a vision, a dream they never thought they could reach,
but I know there's no place with enough hope to save you,
and defend you from keeping this mind set of
when you have these inevitable hollow feelings of hope.
This is something you need to consider because,
I've been there, this place where blind men can see.
A life, a vision, a dream they never they could reach.
There wasn't any hope, there's nothing to save you,
save you from when your alone,
and there's no one left for you to leech off of,
and no one left for you to latch on to.
I ask you to listen because, I've been there,
this place where blind men can see.
A life, a vision, a dream they never they could reach.
There wasn't any hope, there's nothing to save you,
and you'll be alone, there will be nothing left,
the words you say and actions you give are far past forgiveness.
This is my final offering for your attention because,
I've been there, this place where blind men can see.
A life, a vision, a dream they never they could reach.
There wasn't any hope, there's nothing to save you.
Absolutely nothing. You know what?
Hope cant save you, your life, your vision, your dream.
I know this, believe me...I've been there.