

Alain Clark, Let Some Air In

Hey there girl, here's a little song for ya
Keep in mind that it's only my words
I want to tell you a little bit about me
I was once lost, gone from the centre couldn't tell what direction I was going in Followed the signs of another man's promise
Yeah another man's promise

Oh, I turn to the outside for answers
But I knew I could only find within
And the question grew like a cancer
Making my mind and my body limb
I wish there was a backway out
I wish there was a backway out

I turn to the mirror to find me
Then close my eyes again
Then I open the window behind me and let some air in

Held my breath as I swam to the surface
The higher I got the stronger the current
I was so afraid that I'd drown
As I was slowly sinking back down

I look to the sky for the answers
That I knew I could only find within
And I put all my hopes in tomorrow
As I didn't know where to begin
I wish there was a backway out
I wish there was a backway out

I turn to the mirror to find me
Then close my eyes again
Then I open the window behind me
And let some air in
Oh, let some air in
Let some air in, (yeah!) /7x

I turn to the outside for answers
That I knew I could only find within
And the question grew like a cancer
Making my mind and my body lame
I wish there was a backway out
I wish there was a backway out

I turn to the mirror to find me
Then close my eyes again
Then I open the window behind me
And let some air in

Then I turn to the mirror to find me
Then close my eyes again
Then I open the window behind me
And let some air in
Let some air in /4x
