During a nightmare
My eyes opened
On the naked chest On top of the heart
A red butterfly was flapping its wings

Sleeping in the coffins underground
Far away ancestors of our clan
Their majestic, king-like blood
Screams from within me

Awaken, awaken aristocrat
Gather, gather majesty

In a society that rejects irregularity
A true beauty can't be born
To the civilians of rotting, infection, and lower class
Heaven gives punishment

Mothers insane for brands
Use money for everything
Our children so cute

In the hands of uneducated teachers

Never mind the publicity
Wrapped in each other
Man and woman like dogs
Even love falls to trash
Those without modesty shall be mourned

Embrace, embrace the all-knowing
The light, the light in the soul

If beauty disappears from this land
We cannot live
We who are prideful, noble, and pure-blooded
Hold the sword of judgement

Destroy all that disgrace these eyes
The voice that protects me echoes

Awaken, awaken aristocrat
Invoke, invoke majesty

With democracy, mimicking each other,
A dream-like future cannot be built
For the land of lies, vanity, and insults
Heaven splits apart

Let fall, let fall the shining
Light, light to this body

If beauty disappears from this land
We cannot live
We who are prideful, noble, and pure-blooded
Wield the sword of judgement
