In the distant past
These hands weren't wings
But a pair of swords

On a bed of grass in the summer heat
We breathed silently like beasts

Now in loneliness and emptiness
What do I do with my boiling blood?
If I yearn for true strength
Will I be led to it?

As my steel armor reflects, I go
Following the soldier's dreams
Remove the shield that covers the heart
The border that can't be seen is right there

Even if you hear a voice from the depths of hell
"The dawn is still far, far away"

Though stardust is untouchable
And the one I want
Will disappear tonight.

I search for the eternal tomorrow
It's a fleeting moment in time
Connected through eternity

There is no awe and reverence
What do I do with life's emptiness
True gentleness is not raised
In jealousy's cradle

Charge ahead as the black stallions neigh bravely,
You, the descendants of that heroic nation
Jumping over the high fence that surrounds us
The world we've yet to see is boundless

Songs pour from beyond the heavens
Receive my blessing

As my steel armor reflects, I go
Pursuing the warrior's path
Let go of the bond that traps those thoughts
The muddy footprints will never dry

Charge ahead as the black stallions neigh bravely,
You, the forefathers of that graceful nation
Being thrown into endless battles,
Until your soul is possessed with the soul of truth

Another me calls out to myself saying,
"Everything begins from here"
