Alison Moyet, Satellite

You were alight and I wouldn't look away You said I was sky and caught me anyway How could I ever know you burn all that you hold Now sing to the walls I've cared more I want to go, I want to stay, I want your name And I want nothing that you are Not even when you're moving me (And you're moving me) I want to talk, I want to sleep Want to get up and wash the rest of you away You never had me Satellite

Maybe today I'll not wear you anymore I'll fold you away, lay you down where you belong Maybe you'll wake in time to break open a smile Wide and wild as the Humber

Satellite Are you dancing tonight Are you burning as bright As the she-boy outside The firefly
