

All The Day Holiday, La Voyage

A mighty combustion lifted into the night.
All the stars are spread apart wide.
My mind with young dreams alive again.
300 million people... Those knowing eyes
inside their minds, afraid to think their thoughts,
and we're gone.
You said that we'd never make it.
It never phased me, it never changed me.
You said that time would heal all things.
It never phased me, it never brought me down.
A voyage to the moon,
a chance to see, perspective gone.
Our lives will never be the same again.
I look to the sky to get us home.
Maybe there will be a star
that leads us through the storm,
and to our homes again.
You said that we'd never make it.
It never phased me, it never changed me.
You said that we'd never make it.
It never phased me, it never changed me.
You said that time would heal all things.
It never phased me, it never made me.
I'm on my own time now.
Can you believe it? You've gotta see it.
All of us living loud into the future,
we'll call this home.
My heart runs wild through the fields I've found,
So clear the air and follow the current home.
You said that we'd never make it.
It never phased me, it never changed me.
You said that time would heal all things.
It never phased me, it never made me.
I'm on my own time now.
Can you believe it? You've gotta see it.
All of us living loud into the future,
we'll call this home.
