Allan Gary, Forgotten, But Not Gone

Allan Gary It Would Be You Forgotten, But Not Gone (Johnny Macrae/Buzz Carson)

Her birthday came and went without a card, or a single I love you On their anniversary she sat all alone at a table set for two She tries her best to please him, but she never hears one single word of praise She feels just like a stranger, in a home where love has seen its better days

Well he's taken her for granted God only knows why she keeps hangin' on 'Cause it's better to be gone, but not forgotten Than to be forgotten, but not gone

Somehow he can't remember, when he's late to even take the time to call And even on the nights he's there she gets the feeling he's not there at all She's become a prisoner in that big old house where sweet love used to be Well, it's not even over but Lord she feels just like a memory

Well he's taken her for granted God only knows why she keeps hangin' on 'Cause it's better to be gone, but not forgotten Than to be forgotten, but not gone

'Cause it's better to be gone, but not forgotten Gone, but not forgotten Than to be forgotten, but not gone
