

Amon Din, Into The Mirror

Sometimes When you're alone somewhere
When Depression put it's heavy hands on you
When you are stranger to yourself out here
Then hope that mirror can tell you what to do

[chorus:]

Into the Mirror

You'll trace yourself

'till all is lost, all is done

The man inside is not me

It is the shadow of humanity

When all is lost, is lost...

There is none of this

When you stop to take a look at the mirror

There is a feeling deep inside you

That something is going to swallow your personality

Which is trapped inside for all eternity

The monster that is searching for your soul

Lives in the Mirror and awaits your final look

At the glass area that hides so many great Secrets

When you can read yourself, like an open book

All this time I wonder if I'm talking to myself

Or is it really someone there when I look at

My own face and body and feel it's really me

Yes, but there's no soul, just Shadow of Man

[repeat chorus]

I will never understand myself

'cause it's not really me that stands there

And stare in my reflection of hidden humanity

Or is it maybe me who is trapped, on the other side...

On the other side!
