

Andreyana Triana, Lost Where I Belong

Staring at an empty page again
Searching deep within my soul
Sometimes I don't know where to begin
When there's nothing left to hold
So I will sing you a song
That I know that I can lean on
So I will sing you a song
That I know that I can lean on
Because I'm lost where I belong
Where I belong
Drifting around this empty place again
Hoping to feel whole
Hearing nothing but the world spinning
The silence is louder than before
So I will sing you a song
That I know that I can lean on
So I will sing you a song
That I know that I can lean on
Because I'm lost where I belong
Where I belong
I can't give you what I don't have to give
Am I going somewhere? Still I try to believe
I can't give you what I don't have to give
Am I going somewhere? Still I try to believe
So I will sing you a song
That I know that I can lean on
So I will sing you a song
That I know that I can lean on
Because I'm lost where I belong
Where I belong
