

Anemonia, Cruel Beauties

Take my hand
I will never let you fall again
Lay your head on my breast
I need you to feel my beating heart
Closely in you
So many tears were shed
Like rivers who cannot find rain
So many frozen dreams
Broken by the tortured wind
But all this time it was there
The misty sounds of the deep sea
And now by the snow its melody echoes oh oh
Making its way to my ears
Never will a snow flake
Lay again in purple gardens
Never will one living wonder
Be all alone again
Beyond this Forever-Night
The dead grey fades away
Beyond the night's crisped sky
The Moonlight gently smiles
Closely in me
Take my hand
I will never let you fall again
Lay your head on my breast
I need you to feel my beating heart
Closely into your frail body
So many mysteries
Lies in the sea's Cruel Beauties
So many living wonders
Sing their dreams to others
Never will I doubt again
The return of the rain
Never will I feel again
The fear of the Crystal pain
Beyond her motherly hands
Is where all the beauty stands
Beyond her comforting breast
My heart found a place to rest