

Angelo Kelly, Alone

It comes so fast and seems so exciting
It sure is some kind of rush, a bit like your first crush
You tell yourself and all the others
I ain't gonna change, I'll always be the same
But friends you thought you had are simply no longer there
And all your new ones love you 'cause you're a millionaire
You're so alone, surrounded by your enemy
You're so alone, even at the top of the charts
You're so alone, 'cause that won't fill your heart
You're so alone, I pity you, I pity you, huh
Spending money like if it were nothing
Completely lost the touch, it's all way too much
The whole world loves you but you've lost your life
You're trying to get a grip but now you're starting to slip
Well the media loves it when you, when you lose yourself
At first they build your ego and then they break your health
You're so alone, surrounded by your enemy
You're so alone, even at the top of the charts
You're so alone, 'cause that won't fill your heart
You're so alone, I pity you, I pity you
Forget the pressure, just come back home
For life's a treasure, the only one you own
It's not important to show them you're on top
Get back to living and leave them all to rot
You're so alone, surrounded by your enemy
You're so alone, even at the top of the charts
You're so alone, 'cause that won't fill your heart
You're so alone, I pity you, I pity you
You're so alone, surrounded by your enemy
You're so alone, even at the top of the charts
You're so alone, 'cause that won't fill your heart
You're so alone, I pity you, I pity you
I pity you, I pity you, I pity you
