

Annie Lennox, Loneliness

Loneliness...

It's a place that I know well.
It's the distance between us
and the space inside ourselves.
And emptiness...
Is the chattering in your head.
It's the call of the living and the race from life to death.
And I know-
yeah, I know-
what you feel...

And I've got a longing
that's hard to find-
won't give me no peace of mind.
Something that I've lived with all along.
Days and weeks and months and years,
fillin' in the time, my dear-
tryin' to find the place where I belong.

Hopelessness...

Is the darkness of your heart.
It's the sound of one hand clapping
while it's pulling you apart.
And I know-
yeah, I know-
what you feel...

And I've got a longing
that's hard to find-
won't give me no peace of mind.
Something that I've lived with all along.
Days and weeks and months and years,
fillin' in the time, my dear-
tryin' to find the place where I belong.
And I've got a hunger
that's hard to fill-drivin' me on overkill.
Tellin' me that everything's gone wrong.
Got me a need
that I can't break-
more than I can hardly take.
Somehow I keep on going strong.

When I call your name,
I'm gonna scream out loud.
I'll say...
"Here I am standing in the crowd.
You'll say, 'Come to me,
with your open mind.
You never know what you still might find.'"
But you keep me here
like a cancelled flight-
an empty train
runnin' through the night.
An orphan child,
a broken shoe,
and I'm still down here
lookin' out for you.

Are you there for me?
'Cause I'm here for you.
