

Antigone Rising, Happy Home

Of course I knew I shouldn't love you
So I fought with all the strength in me not to
To force this miles above you
Miles with nothing in between
There's barely anything to leave you now
But memories conjured up in both our minds
I'm so afraid that I might lose them
In the trajectory of time
In this happy home
I am so alone
The picture on the wall of smiling faces
Says it all
Of course I knew I couldn't love you
But then that would be a fairy tale
So I fell hook line and sink her
I'm a fool who's suffered well
In this happy home
I am so alone
The picture on the wall of smiling faces
Says it all
I'll never know you
Waiting turns to sleep
The only promises I'll make are ones
That I can keep
Of course I knew I couldn't love you
Of course I knew I shouldn't love you
Of course I knew
