

Anvil, Black or white

Anvil

Miscellaneous

Black or white

Living in opposition, drawing lines in the sand

We all have a point of view in the freedom of our land

If it's not your colour it's the thoughts within your head

Living in fear and ignorance is how lies are spread

More and more I see it, people dying from gunplay

Horrible acts of violence permeate the world today

We look to blame each other for the colour of our skin

Blinded by propoganda, where did this all begin?

Black or white, black or white

Who is wrong, who is right

Black or white, black or white

Never wrong, never right

When will this conflict subside?

When our hatred has died

When will we learn to get along?

When we learn to differ right from wrong

Living with each other, no more line in the sand

Shedding all the lies and myths, wash the blood from our hands

If it's not your colour it's the thoughts within your mind

Parents teach your children, it's the only hope for mankind