A scream, a shout far in the distance
Maybe the first or second floor
And curtains colour in the windows
Never seen behind closed doors
A silent sage behind the lightness
Domestic harmony for sure
Now send the mirrors of the marriage
Outside a world she'll never know
And as I see through the building
I'm falling straight into
A thousand broken mirrors, I can't hide
And outside the bright lights can't hide the pain inside
And I've broken a thousand mirrors, now its time
Loving your children with a passion
Protecting them at any cost
Taking the only course of action
There's no more bridges left to cross
Who are the ones who are the guilty?
Who are the ones who wear the scars?
We must not leave our sisters bleeding
We sing this song for civil action
And as I stare through that window
I'm falling straight into a thousand broken mirrors, I can't hide
And outside the bright lights can't hide the pain inside
And I've broken a thousand mirrors, now its time
