From the pretty blue sky
The rainy season disappeared; the end has arrived
Along the tracks, flowers bloom
The telling tears on my cheek hung and fell
Ah...
Somehow

In the drawn out signals, you
Escape through the night; I wonder if something will change
Somehow

In the broken telephone receiver and the story goes nowhere
In a precious place, our crowded warped form
And even the uncaught feelings
I wonder how far we have to run until they become white

Quietly cast your eyes down
In the wonderland, where you should have sought shelter
In the distance, a circuit breaker's vanishing sound
Chimes "goodbye"

Quietly cast your eyes down
In the wonderland, where you should have sought shelter
Lost feelings spread and reverberate
Goodbye

A sky so clear it melts
