Radio Tower

Colors rise up into these mundane days
And seem to melt, here
Squinting my eyes, colors rise up into the days I search for
And seem to melt

From the words that the antenna picked up, our broken voices were connected

Colors sink into these distorted and creaking days
And seem to disappear
Reaching out my a hands, colors rise up into the days I search for
And seem to melt

From the words that the antenna picked up, our broken voices were connected
Raising the antenna, connect my everything together

Check, okay?

That day that I lost everything
I kicked down the door and flew away
The radio tower that stood atop a hill
Memories of that day overflow

That's right, I'll ascertain myself more of my voice, with words
My heart that seems to stop touches the atmosphere, and disappears into eternity
That's right, I'll ascertain myself more of your voice, with words
Your heart that I can hear touches the atmosphere, and reaches me

That's right
What about you?

From the words that the antenna picked up, our broken voices were connected
Raising the antenna, connect my everything together

Check, okay?
