

Autumn, Lullaby For Marguerite

(1904-1993)

windswept and moonhung singing softly next to you oh sweet delicate woman where has all your strength gone to gone to gone to where has it gone to
softest hands
i take their frailness in my own hands
hands that mended children's dreams now grasp for mary's grace her grace her grace
sweet mother
guide her home
sweet, sweet mother guide her home sleep now woman
let the angels come to you and
in their wings
you will find peace
you will find peace
i know
