

Barry Manilow, Losing Touch

I can tell something up
You havn't touched your scotch
You've been starring out the window
Now your starring at you watch
And lately that's been happening to much
I think we're losing touch

Is it something that I've done
Or thing I never said
It's been getting pretty quiet
There on you side of the bed
Remember when we used to talk so much
I think we're loseing touch

After all the love we found together
Who had ever guessed ,that we could fall
After all the things we had in common
Where they to commom after all

Won't you tell me what's wrong
I haven't got a clue
Is there something we can take for this
Or somethink we can do
Together you and I have had so much
There's so much to lose
And I think we're losing touch
