Barry Manilow, Where does the time go

Oh what a time what a warm an wonderous time so sweet a shinning moment in the sun Oh what a time was there ever such a time then suddenly it's done the moment passes where, where does the time go must we let it end where, where does the time go gone to soon my friend and where, where go the echo's of our laughter ringing the air Oh where ever the time goes I will see you there must we let it end and where, where go the echo's of our laughter ringing the air Oh where ever the time goes I will see you there I will see you there
