

Bathory, Dragon's Breath

Ride the Dragon's breath, mist of poison green
Come ye flames, a burning death, face the unseen
Deep within the cave, lit up by the torch, a pale gleam
As told of in the ancient tales, the Sword of gold and steel
Eyes of ember, fangs and claws
Creature of fire
Jaws of death, walk through the haze
Crimson and dire
Engulfed in mist, the Sword of Gods
Onwards son and ride the Dragon's breath
Struck from mountain are, chilled in morning dew
Forged by hand of Gods, when the world was young, this land anew
Blade of shining steel, grip covered in gold
Carved into its blade, the legend unfold
Eyes of ember, fangs and claws
Creature of fire
Jaws of death, walk through the haze
Crimson and dire
Gods in the shy, the Sword is mine
Untouched I am by the mist of the Dragon's breath