

Benton Paul, Look for the Light

There is sun on the horizon
A candle in a cave
A little bit of color on the next page
There is always something better
When you look for the light on a dark day
I don't know all the pain
That you've been through
I don't claim to understand
All I know is that it's killing you
And if you just can't handle it
One more day
There is sun on the horizon
A candle in a cave
A little bit of color on the next page
There is always something better
When you look for the light on a dark day
There are those
Who struggle all their life
Only to find just another hill to climb
You got more than you can realize
So open your eyes
And find that light
There is sun on the horizon
A candle in a cave
A little bit of color on the next page
There is always something better
When you look for the light on a dark da