

Beth Crowley, Always

We were both children when,
so full of innocence,
we used to play our games in flowery fields.
You're the one who could see the good inside of me and I knew then that I had something real

I used to love you from afar
as we all decided who we are.
You were never mine to have
still I loved you to the last,
'cause you were my, you are my always.

For years my feelings grew,
but I was losing you,
the only happiness I'd ever known.
Another came along
and slowly won your heart,
I cared enough for you to let you go.

I used to love you from afar
as we all decided who we are.
You were never mine to have
still I loved you to the last,
'cause you were my, you are my always.

A thousand times the words just died right on my lips.
Regret washed over me with its swift and stinging kiss.

I used to love you from afar
as we all decided who we are.
You were never mine to have
still I loved you to the last,
'cause you were my, you are my always.
