

Billy Corgan, Black Irish

emily, emily i can't, emily
i can't leave
so i climb, so i climb on your so i climb on your fire escape in the rush of stealing what was mine i stumbled on the notion of time lost emily emily i can't, emily
i can't leave

forgive me, not today
forgive me stay in your sleep
forgive me stay in the last hours of light your patient pantomime heals the stories that i tell to myself/and no one else no whisper on my mind no tired arms that bind can steal you away/from me this time

so i ride, so i ride on your so i ride/on you hobby horse finde this a better way with brides dressed in white with dreams of starting over right a kindred soul i'm leaving a past that i must fight discover my freedloms/up in lights the kiss that is america the babes dressed in blue my wish of starting over/lies with you forgive me...
