

Bob Schneider, The Other Side

I have reason to believe the grass might be a little greener on the other side
that if I turned myself inside out I might get out alive and I have reason to believe that if you get it right just once you would be satisfied
I have reason to believe
the grass might be a little greener
on the other side

that everything you do or say well it is just a dream
and I have reason to believe that this electric midnight feelings filled with razor beams
I have reason to believe that if I could just be all that you want that I'd have some place I could hide
I have reason to believe
the grass might be a little greener

that if I were just a little taller I'd be better off
I have reason to believe
That if my head came with a switch Why I would turn it off
I have reason to believe That everything that I have learned Is all just a goddamn lie
I have reason to believe
the grass might be a little greener
on the other side
