

Bracket, Me Vs. The World

Now all I need is some misunderstanding it brings comort on the days that I feel plain My hate eclipses love that I give to everyone as they watch me force my life down the drain

Now I'm trying to find a way to die inside
So I throw a couple colors in my hair and I'll kick and scream at the world again
the world again
the world again
the world again

I'll starve my cold and I'll feed my fever to you my body is a temple with a piercing or two Lost innocence keeps me closer to my friends I've always had the mouth but never told the truth

Now I'm trying to find
a way to die inside
and I'll kick and scream at the world again
the world again
the world again
the world again

Now I'm trying to find
a way to die inside
So I throw my middle finger in the air and kick and scream at the world again
the world again
the world again
the world again
