

Celine Dion, Aren't They All Our Children

Don't look away
An innocent face
Cries and searches for some comfort
Love will provide
What fate has denied
All they ask is simply someone
With arms that reach
With arms that reach
And words that teach
And words that teach
We'll be their strength
Yeah yeah
In times of need
Every boy and girl
Should dance on dreams
Around this world
Aren't they all our children after all
Who will dry their tears
And lift them up
If they should fall
Aren't they all our children after all
Who will be there
To show them loving care
They are this world's living treasure
The heart of a child
Is born to wear a smile
And feel joyful without measure
With arms that reach
With arms that reach
And words that teach
And words that teach
We'll be their strength
We'll be their strength
In times of need
In times of need
We'll hold their hearts
In loving hands
Help them believe
In love again
Every boy and girl
Should dance on dreams
Around this world
Aren't they all our children after all
Aren't they all our children after all
And as they grow
They will always know
That love will ease their troubled road
Their troubled road
And you and I
Are their wings
To help them fly
Every boy and girl
Should dance on dreams
Around this world
Aren't they all our children after all
Every boy and girl
Should dance on their dreams
Around this world
Aren't they all our children after all
Aren't they all our children after all
Aren't they all our children after all
Oh
Aren't they all our children after all
