Cemetery Of Scream, The Hourglass

Far

so far away there's an impulse in your brain it remains invisible but it's waiting for a day

In the maze of the ego's secret place you'll detect your other self always silent still yourself

The grains of sand are pouring down what was then will not be now you're staring at your hourglass ashes to ashes and dust to dust

Close enough the old book of hate and love study life to learn to die till you utter your last cry

Feel your blood getting frozen getting stopped you don't have to fight again no more living no more pain