Chapman Tracy, Remember The Tinman

Chapman Tracy
New Beginning
Remember The Tinman
There are locks on the doors
And chains stretched across all the entries to the inside
There's a gate and a fence
And bars to protect from only God knows what lurks outside

Who stole your heart left you with a space That no one and nothing can fill Who stole your heart who took it away Knowing that without it you can't live

Who took away the part so essential to the whole Left you a hollow body Skin and bone What robber what thief who stole your heart and the key

Who stole your heart
The smile from your face
The innocence the light from your eyes
Who stole your heart or did you give it away
And if so then when and why

Who took away the part so essential to the whole Left you a hollow body Skin and bone What robber what thief Who stole your heart and the key

Now all sentiment is gone Now you have no trust in no one

Who stole your heart Did you know but forget the method and moment in time Was it a trickster using mirrors and sleight of hand A strong elixir or a potion that you drank

Who hurt your heart
Bruised it in a place
That no one and nothing can heal
You've gone to wizards, princes and magic men
You've gone to witches, the good the bad the indifferent

But still all sentiment is gone But still you have no trust in no one

If you can tear down the walls Throw your armor away remove all roadblocks barricades If you can forget there are bandits and dragons to slay And don't forget that you defend an empty space

And remember the tinman Found he had what he thought he lacked

Remember the tinman Go find your hear and take it back

Who stole your heart Maybe no one can say One day you will find it I pray
