Chris Whitley, God Thing

You never notice child And I just pretend again About the power shift On your God thing I never forget falling now The times you rode with me You followed me down And never had to lose yourself With your God thing As I tried to strip high gear again Going so fast, so fast I never cared about your politics All them dumb ass semantics All them other fucked side effects Because now if I could touch you there Sister, of course if I could reach you there Even though you'll be left alone Even though they always get it wrong
