

Closterkeller, Like Rain Against Stone

I am a woman so I read between the lines
We're both going to lose if it's her you'll believe
I can see more than you in those evil eyes
Like rain against stone, my love, my tears

Blinded by her words, you slip away from my arms
The heavy smell of defeat is rushing on to me
In the now clear space between more distant and gone
I hear the door close

And struck by how naive I was freeze powerless
Naked and bare down to the heart in a flood of shame
She is a saint, she's an idol, it's not gonna change
See the signs! Wake up and realize

She is feeding on your faith in innocence
She'll take what you've got and everything you could have
In this game I'm the end and you are just the means
Oh so deep the pain your awakening will bring

I want to get you back but can't lift my broken wings
Among the ruins I pray everyday for her death
Written on black, in black, the unspoken meaning
You don't see anything, but I can understand

And slowly all sense is gone in trying to explain
You're falling down, drunk with a truth that's not there
She is a saint, she's an idol, it's not gonna change
Please see the signs! Wake up and realize

She is feeding on your faith in innocence
She'll take what you've got and everything you could have
In this game I'm the end and you are just the means
Oh so deep the pain your awakening will bring