

Conway Deborah, Today I Am A Daisy

Deborah Conway

Today I am a daisy

Tomorrow I will be the chain holding up your heart

Today I am a waitress but tomorrow I could be an astronaut

Flying to the moon, playing amongst the stars

Seeing the galaxy from inside a jar

Today I am a sea-shell

Tomorrow I will be the ocean roaring in your ear

Today I am your daughter

Tomorrow I will make your disappointments disappear

And you will come fly with me

We will play leap frog through the years

And life will be elegant

We can chase away the tears

Goodbye goodbye

Today will be tomorrow

Goodbye goodbye

Tomorrow's almost here

Goodbye goodbye

Today will be tomorrow

Goodbye goodbye

Something might be clear

Today I am a daisy

Tomorrow I will be Vincent's sunflowers,

Claude's lilies anything I want

Today I am a waitress but tomorrow well I might be an astronaut

I will be bathed in love

I will be soaking in tenderness

And you will be standing there

The one who loves me best