

Dali's Dilemma, Hills Of Memory

I wait for emotion
For what I feel, for what I see
To fear myself, to fear illusion
The more they love, the more I bleed

I will decide
The sun will shine
I can't go on now
My hope is unsung

Suddenly I'm blinded
Now I walk along
I walk along these memories

It guides my soul
The thirst is quenched with company
My conscience yells but I don't hear it
Forever sleep

It's getting dark
I'm clenched with fear
Please let me go
I must exit here

Suddenly I'm blinded
Now I walk along
I walk along these memories

You took my hand, banished reality
I was afraid, but yet I starved

We all grow cold, the memory fades away
Some lives worth some betrayed
Look into your heart to live externally

I will decide the sun will shine
I can't go on my now hope is unsung

Suddenly I am blinded
Now I walk along
I walk along these memories
