

David Gray, The Rice

The draft blew cold under the door
When we threw wour clothes to the kitchen floor
The broccoli boils in the pan on the gas stove where you stand Won't you take this spatula in your hand?

Let the rice burn
It cannot deter my love for you
we have no concern
under the hem of the night
under the hem of the night

Out on the roof over havoc streets Where the sky is a blanket each sweet kiss so melodramatic embroidered by shadows by the fridge I reminice

Let the rice burn
It cannot deter my love for you
we have no concern

we stagger in the doorway and all of the sudden the drum of the rain on the heather hills now everything's changed and our silence is bitter and you are all unhinged

Let the rice burn
we have no concern
we have no concern
oh we have no concern
