Deadsun, Drowning

Take me away again.

I feel the same today, as any other day.

They're all the same without you.

Look at me again.

Wasting the day away with my only friend I haven't pushed away. I haven't pushed away.

And I think of you. It brings me only pain.

And I drink with you to make it go away.

And I tell myself; tomorrow is the day I'll be okay without you.

I Felt your ghost again.

I feel your breath. I turn but you're not there.

You're not there.

And I'll love to wear your sea again.

And I swallow all of your fears and then die to run away.

From what evil lies beneath.

And I think of you. It brings me only pain.

And I drink with you to make it go away.

And I tell myself; tomorrow is the day I'll be okay without you.

And I see your face again.

Your embalm of a glass, lyin' in the rain.

On a cold November day.

And I think of you. It brings me only pain.

And I drink with you to make it go away.

And I tell myself; tomorrow is the day I'll be okay without you.