

Deep Blue Something, Wouldn't Change A Thing

The first thing that I do, when I turn myself to bed,
Is pray that I will wake up
Then sleep enters my head.
Now I'm not afraid of dying, I'm proud of all we've done,
But I think I'd go to heaven
And I'd be the only one.

"A simple man in a complex world,"
That's what I've heard them say.
But I hear little voices and they say we're okay.
And you'll say I'm a dreamer, we'll never be number one,
But I just can't help thinking that the best songs go unsung.

And I wouldn't change a thing if my mother said to,
So why should I change a thing because a D.J. says?
I thought that you'd agree after all we've been through.
No I wouldn't change a thing if a Leper said to.

No I wouldn't change a thing,
Because I don't take chances
With something that is close to me.

She said, "What are you doing to me?
You don't spend your time like you used to do."
I said, "I don't need this kind of junk,
You're talking too much to me, and I don't believe in you."
She said, "I want to take you out and break your heart, and bust
you down and drag you out, I don't care one thing about you. . ."

As she turned around she kissed me good-bye.
I said, "I think I'll be all right without you."
