

Diesel Boy, The Continuing Misadventures Of Ge

From the Bowery to Brighton you've all heard my call
I've got two pierced nipples and a ring through my balls
My name is Slackerman, superhero for the masses
I'm trying to rid society from the rich upper classes
I've got sideburns like Elvis and a shaggy goatee
I was born in 73
Most superheros fly high, but me, I'd rather skate
Both parents are lawyers, divorced when I was eight
My wallets got a chain and superpowers to boot
I'll lasso you like a cowboy then I'll die your hair blue
I'm studying psych at the local JC
'cause I don't really know what to be

My partner in slackdom is a chick named Danielle
I met her at the drive thru of taco bell
She drives her mom's green Volvo, bag of tricks on her back
She wears her hair short, wears her Doc Martens black
With her Maybelline lips and her Catholic school skirt
She'll leave bankers with nothing but dirt
It's a thankless job being a hero and all
But I've gotta do it or GenX will fall
Yuppies and Boomers get outta my way
'cause I'm taking over and I start today
I am the twenty-something
Hero of the world and I am here for your mocha