Dinosaur Jr., Forget The Swan

It's floating through the abyss Under the brig my head swings down Beware her wrath, the image gone The Shell is crumbling, fix my frown This spell would be clear in non-tradition And stepping on these pieces of pain and smirk And rape goes through to sin my eyes And shapes know where the heartache will lurk Forget the swan, a stone swims near A stone has come, if I could cheer

Forget the swan Forget the swan

Drifting among this rubble

I guess the waiting, wished I would

I found a box, untethered and true

Possession it understood

Forget the swan, a stone swims near

A stone has come, if I could cheer

Forget the swan Forget the swan

How I tried to warn my neighbor But the corn was much too high

In confusion up and threw him, woke up every day

But it's not too late brother, I'll still say you were mine

Forget the swan, a stone swims near

A stone has come, if I could cheer

Forget the swan Forget the swan

Forget the swan, the dreams are gone

The pain goes on, they fly at dawn

Forget the swan
