&lt;/lyrics&gt;

The wind of an Indian summer beats in a warped sound
Crumbled ideal, broken future, no more in me...

Though I want to be with you more, though I want to be by your side more
Weak tear hidden in my smile, I can't conceal any more
Several-year dream with amber colour, at the tip of the end, my true character is there?
I endured to death, I reached for, I arrived but now

We're in hell under control of him

The light what announces the end has gone out, and the stage is in darkness

I want to listen to your voice now, though I want to be here more
Good-bye unnamed you whom I loved from my heart
In the promised land with amber colour, I remember being blown by the wind of an Indian summer
Tears rolled down and blended into blood, new dream with amber colour is in "heart";

Until my voice become hoarse, final...

I will sing until my voice become hoarse
