

Donna The Buffalo, Life Is Strange

morning sun reminds us of the time we spent, stretching stories sharing songs and forget the rest
you know and I know this dance might never end

Life is strange, life is good, and life is all that it should be.

my eyes got caught in a strangers stare he was searching for a witness to a personal dare our lives crashed into a firey destiny

Life is strange, life is good, and life is all that it should be.
Life is strange, life is good, and life is all that it should be

When the clouds steal your shadow and you have no sense of direction, lay your body down

And when your standing in the water and the world begins to matter, and you know you hear laugh

When the clouds steal your shadow and you have no sense of direction,
lay your body down

And when your standing in the water and the world begins to matter, and you know you hear laugh

Morning sun reminds us of the time we spent, stretching stories sharing songs and forget the rest
you know and I know this dance might never end

Life is strange, life is good, and life is all that it should be
Life is strange, life is good, and life is all that it should be

Life is strange, life is good, and life is all that it should be

Life is strange, life is good, and life is all that it should be