

Down By Law, Too Much Grey

it's time to make the break make life accelerate lying there won't make you great sleep doesn't make you see just take a chance on life some chances won't come twice it could be everything
never know til you try it's not a black and white world there's too much grey and sometimes truth lies hidden when you need to know the way and you know that your black could be someone's white but the more you're thinking like them
the more they could be right you've got seventy years to make a difference here you won't get there it's clear living your life in fear and so I look at you your three piece suit of blue you dragon slayer, you St. George never fought for fold everybody wants to be a pillar of strength and an overflowing vessel of truth
but stand up, look around take a little step and find what you can do now don't burn every bridge don't be afraid to cross
it could be everything
never know til you try